THE SILENCERS . . . This is the self-effacing group of Marathon drive units (up front, our furnace blower, oil burner and air conditioning motors), that's quietly been taking over in millions of American homes during the last two decades. It's all a soundly conceived plot of the residential OEM's, who want all the help they can get to cut a little of the clatter out of modern living. Like motor torque without tremble. Horsepower that won't whinny when it starts, and a drive that won't whine about work. Which is what we've delivered, in over 10,000,000 units to date. All end-result engineered to perform so perfectly that when you say the word "Marathon", you can hear a pin drop. Try it.

And now the Packers face the greatest challenge of all . . . a third straight championship.

No team in the National Football League has ever won three consecutive league titles since the playoff system was started in 1933.

Six teams, including Green Bay, have tried . . . and all failed.

The Bears went for No. 3 in 1942 — only to lose to the Redskins in the championship game 14-6. The Eagles of 1950 finished third in a bid for a third straight. The Lions of 1954 were creamed 56-10 by the Browns in a third-straight title game. The Browns of 1956 settled for fourth place. The Colts of 1960 wound up third.

Green Bay won championships in 1961 and 1962 but ranked second in 1963 despite a record of 11-2-1, good enough to gain a playoff berth most years.

The present Packers are the first team in the history of pro football to earn a second shot at the coveted three-straight prize. They whipped the Browns 23-12 in the 1965 championship game and then the 1966 club downed the Cowboys 34-27. As icing to the cake, the Packers won the first official world championship, defeating the Kansas City Chiefs 35-10 in the first Super Bowl last Jan. 15.

The road to the 1967 championship will take a different and rockier route. Due to the new alignment of the National Football League, the Packers must first win the Central Division championship of the Western Conference. If successful, they will meet the winner of the Coastal Division for the Western Conference title. The Western and Eastern Conference champs then saw it off for the league crown.

While the Packers are automatically recognized as "defending champions," this particular handle won't figure in their psychological strategy for the historic 1967

Coach Vince Lombardi established this pattern of thinking as the season approached:

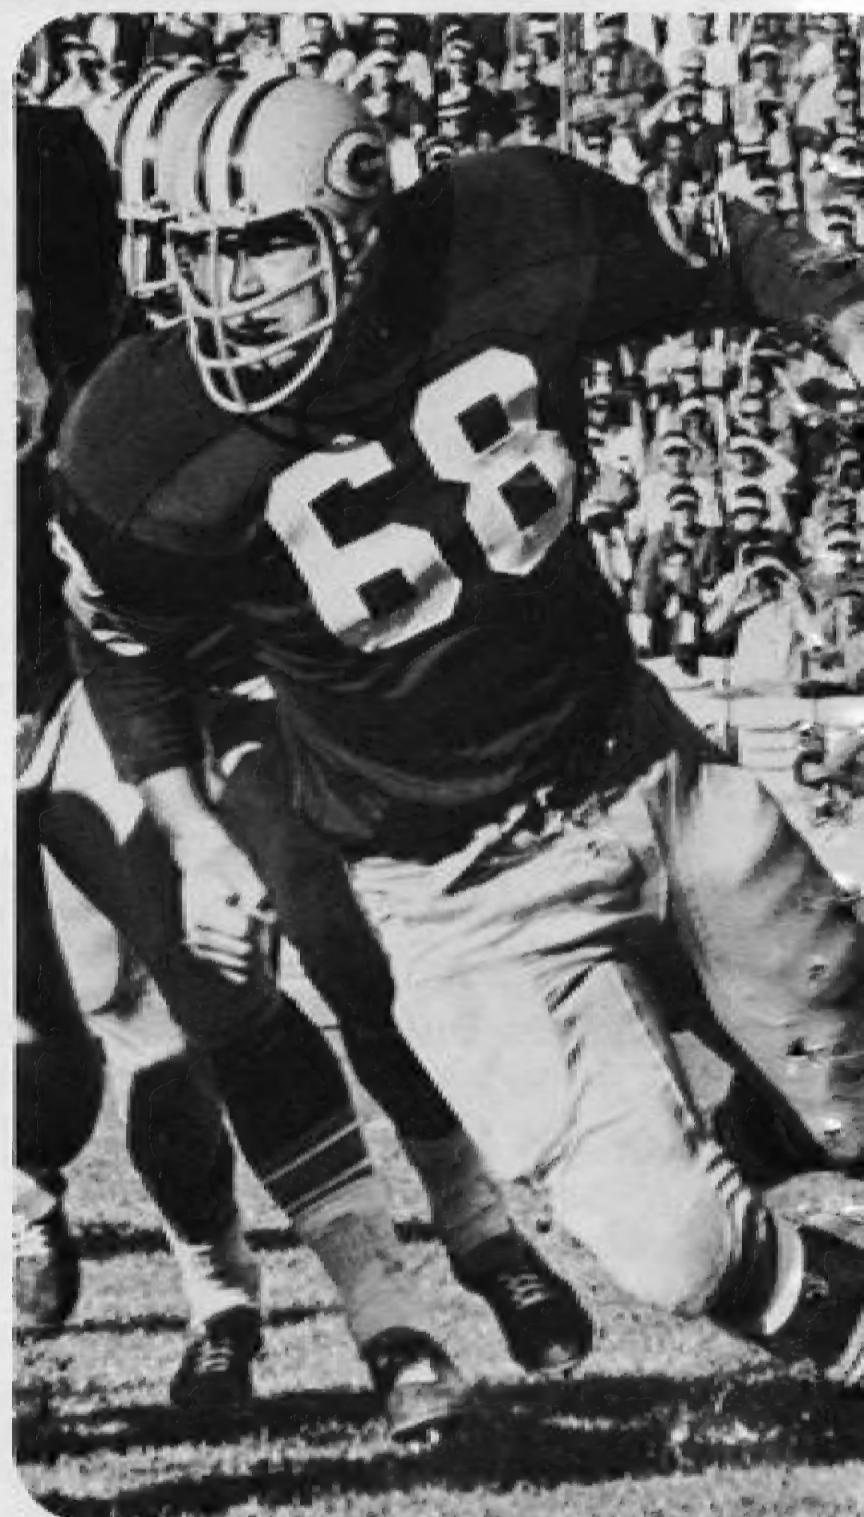

"We are not going to defend our title, we are going to fight for it. Once the season begins we are no longer champions. We must fight for the title all over again."

Thus, the Packers' theme this season spells out to a good old-fashioned football word — FIGHT.

This, of course, is nothing new to the Packer vocabulary. With Lombardi leading the charge, the Packers fought their way to five Western titles and four league championships since 1960 and have become the standard against whom all other football teams are compared.

The Packers' major asset is experience, headed by Quarterback Bart Starr, the league's most valuable player last year, and a host of other all-pros. This experience will be backed up by three outstanding second-year players — Running Backs Donny Anderson and Jim

LIKELY TO PLAY KEY ROLES IN 1967 CAMPAIGN ARE SOPHOMORES DONNY ANDERSON (44), GALE GILLINGHAM (68) AND JIM GRABOWSKI (33).

CHALLENGE

Grabowski and Guard Gale Gillingham, not to mention an excellent crew of rookies, headed by versatile Bob Hyland, who can play three positions in the offensive line, and quarterback Don Horn.

Since this is a new-club year, the Packers lost some of their experience via the stocking of the newly-formed New Orleans Saints, who selected Paul Hornung, Bill Curry and Phil Vandersea. In addition, nine-year veteran fullback Jim Taylor played out his option and was lost to the club.

The Packers will miss Hornung's running and leadership and Taylor's hard-hitting, but Anderson and Grabowski proved their ability to take up where Hornung and Taylor left off with flashes of exciting form in 1966. The departure of center Curry is offset by a hale and hearty Ken Bowman.

The Packer offense and defense figures to work together like that proverbial clock again. This was very much in evidence when the Bays clinched division and league titles last year. They beat the Colts in a tight defense-minded 14-10 game Dec. 10 and then out-scored the Cowboys in an offense-minded 34-27 game Jan. 1.

The attack rests in the sound right arm of Starr and the excellent relief furnished by Zeke Bratkowski. They will hold the key to a young and experienced (compared to Hornung and Taylor) rushing corps, topped by the valuable Elijah Pitts, who came into his own when Hornung was hurt in the fifth game last year. Pitts went the rest of the way and was a major figure in the Division and League championship games. The trio of Pitts, Anderson and Grabowski promises to give the Packers more speed than they've had in the past.

Starr, facing defenses stacked against the Pack's rush power last year, made considerable use of the pass and he'll have the same receivers back — Max McGee, Carroll Dale, Boyd Dowler, Marv Fleming and Bob Long.

There will be stiff competition in the line where Gillingham will tangle with Jerry Kramer and/or Fuzzy Thurston for regular duty. Bob Skoronski, coming off his best Packer year, Forrest Gregg and Steve Wright return at tackle. Hyland could be a key replacement in the line.

The gallant Packer defense, which allowed a league low of only 148 points last year, returns intact.

It's the best-knit defense in the league and certainly the proudest. The light front line of Lionel Aldridge, Willie Davis, Hank Jordan and Ron Kostelnik is backed up by three giant linebackers — Lee Roy Caffey, Ray Nitschke and the much-improved Dave Robinson. Behind them are ball-hawks Herb Adderley, Bob Jeter, Willie Wood and Tom Brown.

Bob Brown would seem to have the best chance to break into this unit. The big tackle and/or end is tremendously powerful and will push the defensive linemen. Giant Jim Weatherwax also has his eye on regular duty.

The Packers may split their kicking duties between Don Chandler and Anderson, with Chandler doing the place-kicking and Donny the left-footed punting. A number of new players will be tested as punters and kickers.

The veterans are expected to get excellent competition from a large number of good-looking rookies. Newcomers expected to push the veterans are Jim Mankins, a full-back from Florida State; receiver Dave Dunaway of Duke; linemen Dick Arndt of Idaho, and Tom Cichowski of Maryland; linebacker Jim Flanigan of Pittsburgh; defensive back John Rowser of Michigan; kicker Bill Shear of Cortland State; offensive back Travis Williams of Arizona State; and Hyland and Horn.

One of the keys to the Packers' success has been a strong bench. Players came off the bench repeatedly last year to maintain the club's offensive and defensive tempo. Lombardi will strive to keep his bench as strong as possible.

The Packers are favored to repeat as Western Conference champion . . . and while the task will be more difficult—since every club will make Green Bay a special prize, that's the way the Packers like it.

Meet the First Choices—

By BOB KING
San Diego State Director of
Sports Information

Ask Don Horn what he would like to do best and he would answer without hesitation, "quarterback a football team."

He could have been asked that question 10 years ago and he would still have given the same reply.

The Little All-American quarterback from San Diego State College has a history of being the team leader since he started playing football on the playgrounds of his hometown in Gardena, Calif., a suburb of Los Angeles.

"When I was just a little guy," says the 6-2, 195-pound Horn, "I would watch the Los Angeles Rams play and my eyes were always on the quarterback. I felt that it was within his power to control the destiny of the team. He was like a pitcher in baseball or a playmaker in basketball."

Horn graduated from the playground stage into a quarterback spot, as a sophomore, on the Gardena High football team where he lettered three seasons and was all-Marine League his last two years.

At Gardena High, he was named player of the year and team captain as a senior and was selected to the all-Los Angeles prep team. His leadership qualities also extended into politics when he was elected senior class president.

Following his graduation from high school, Horn went to Washington State University on the advice of friends because "Head coach Jim Sutherland was a quarterback coach and I wanted to learn under him."

He captained the Cougar frosh team in his first year but left when Sutherland left Washington State: "They were thinking of using the quarterback in the run-pass option and I just wanted to throw the ball."

Horn returned to Los Angeles and entered Harbor Junior College as a sophomore. He guided Harbor to a 9-0 season and was elected captain by his teammates.

At the same time, San Diego State had attained national ranking among college division teams under the effervescent young head coach, Don Coryell. Coryell, former defensive back for the University of Washington, had taken over the coaching reins in 1961 and had guided the Aztecs to four consecutive winning seasons through 1964. Their starting quarterback was graduating and Coryell needed a replacement to direct his I-formation offense.

Horn wrote Coryell a letter asking if there was a chance that he could play for the Aztecs. Says Horn, "Coach Coryell came up shortly after and told me, after viewing some films, that I was just what he wanted and that if I came to San Diego, I would be his No. 1 quarterback."

The Aztec campus has never been the same since these two joined forces.

In 1965, Horn directed the Aztecs to an 8-2 record, losing only to California Collegiate Athletic Association foes Long Beach State College, 35-32, and Los Angeles State, 26-12.

Horn led the CCAA in passing with 123 completions out of 206 attempts for a 60 per cent mark and threw 21 touchdown passes. He was ranked 13th nationally in passing and was named to the Little All-Coast team as a junior.

The 1966 season brought both Horn and San Diego State into national focus. The Aztecs dominated the college division, finishing with a 10-0 record and topped both wire service polls.

They culminated the year with a 28-7 win over Montana State University in the NCAA Pacific Coast Regional Championships. That contest saw Horn set an NCAA post-season playoff record of 23 completions in 38 attempts for 342 yards and four touchdowns. All four categories were new records.

For the 1966 season, Horn completed 157 of 291 passes for 22 touchdowns and a 54 per cent figure. His passing yardage in 1965 was 1,688 and in 1966, it was 2,576 yards. The Aztecs led the nation in passing with a 268.1 average per game and were fifth in total offense with a 426.6 average.

Horn currently holds every passing record in the school's record books.

Last season, he called about 95 per cent of the plays and 60 per cent of those were audibles (at the line of scrimmage).

A mentally tough, well-disciplined individual, Horn's only thoughts have been to play the quarterback position. He has been amply rewarded in college for his ability.

Last season, he was a first team Little All-American, was named to the All-Coast team, was voted San Diego's Amateur Athlete of the Year, was named to the East-West game, was elected team captain and most valuable player by his teammates and what was probably the finest honor payed an athlete—selected as a first round choice on the 1966 professional football draft by the World Champion Green Bay Packers.

& HYLAND

BOB HYLAND

By EDDIE MILLER
Boston College Director of
Sports Information

Bob Hyland is an intelligent, handsome, and personable young athlete who stands 6-feet-6, weighs in at 260 pounds, and may still be a growing boy.

About 10 years ago when he was not quite 12 years old and just a "little guy" at St. Bernard's grammar school in his home town of White Plains, N. Y., Bob decided that he was going to be a professional football player. Hyland was then 6 feet tall and 180 pounds and the best all-around athlete in the school. He excelled at football, basketball and baseball and in the classroom as well. In 1959 just before graduating from St. Bernard's, he prompted the principal, Sister Mary Gerald, to predict that "Robert Hyland will be a leader in life — he has the ability to inspire on the athletic field and in the classroom."

Bob continued his schooling at nearby Bishop Stepinac High School. He also continued to grow — physically, athletically and academically. In four years of athletics at Stepinac, Bob lettered in baseball each year as a fastball pitcher, as a rugged rebounder and scorer at center on the basketball team, as one of the better high school linemen in the East on Stepinac's football team, and added to this — the sport of track where he quickly excelled in the hammer, shot, discus and javelin.

Academically, Bob maintained honor roll marks and was elected senior class president and president of the student senate. Physically, he zoomed to 6-4, 225 pounds. Needless to say, the number of colleges seeking his talents were staggering. Fortunately for Boston College, Bob chose this picturesque Jesuit university in the Chestnut Hill section of Newton which borders on the City of Boston.

It was at Boston College that Hyland blossomed into an outstanding college football player under Coach Jim Miller. He got off to a great start as the first unit offensive center and quickly established himself as one of the top frosh prospects.

In his sophomore year Bob reported at 6-5, 245 pounds and took over the starting offensive center position early in the season. Coach Miller was completely sold on his desire and attitude and forecast a tremendous future for this young lad with the quickness and reaction to complement the perfect size for an offensive center.

During the spring of his sophomore year, Hyland divided his time between spring football and varsity baseball. He soon became one of the most feared pitchers in Eastern circles and professional baseball scouts were casting covetous eyes upon him.

By the time his junior year rolled around, Hyland had grown another half inch and packed on another five pounds. He was not only bigger and stronger, but now more experienced. He had an excellent season at center but missed the final three games due to an ankle injury. When a sophomore named Mike Evans pinch hit so well for him, Coach Miller decided to switch Bob to offensive guard in spring practice to reinforce a position at which he would be hit hard by graduation.

Hyland started and finished his senior year as a "bona-fide All America prospect if I ever saw one," according to Coach Miller.

MORE THAN FOOTBALL

By LEE REMMEL
Green Bay Press-Gazette

"Winning," scholarly Vincent Thomas Lombardi has been heard to expound, "is not everything ... It's the only thing."

Although this succinct pronouncement suggests preoccupation with victory for victory's sake, winning is not the only concern of pro football's most successful coach — nor will it be his only monument.

The intense Italian has lined the pockets of his Packers with championship gold, of which they are hardly unmindful, with a masterful blend of spartan leadership, tactical brilliance and shrewd psychology. But, almost any of them will tell you, they are equally grateful for some less tangible but more enduring contributions from the one-time Block of Granite.

"He teaches a man much more than how to play the game of football," a member of his reigning world champions will soberly volunteer in a confidential moment. "He teaches you how to meet the challenges of life. After a few years under Coach Lombardi, you feel capable of dealing with any situation that might arise."

Fleet Carroll Dale, the forthright ex-Ram, is one of those who has been most profoundly influenced by the Packer headmaster's dynamic philosophy.

"I remember one of the first things he told the team in 1965 — my first year with the Packers — was that there should be only three things important to us: One, our church or religion; two, our family; and three, Green Bay Packer football—in that order of importance," the former VPI greyhound revealed.

"He also teaches us humility and gratitude," said Dale, himself a devout man who never has been heard to raise his voice in anger on the field or in the dressing room. "We always kneel together and repeat the Lord's Prayer after a victory, realizing that we were fortunate to win."

"In the two years that I have been with the Packers, I have come to respect and admire Coach Lombardi, not only as a coach but as a real man. He always reminds us that football is similar to many phases of life — the competition, the successes and failures, and the respect and consideration for others, both teammates and opponents. He also tells us not to make excuses or cry when we lose, and to have pride in our organization, pride in our personal performance, and to have determination and dedication strong enough to keep us going when we lose or get knocked back.

"He has said publicly, of course, that members of the 1966 Packer team had love and respect for each other, in explaining the things that helped us win the championship ... He often reminds us that we are dependent on each other and that we win or lose as a team.

"I think he is as rough, tough and as hardnosed as any coach I have known or heard of. Yet he is interested in developing better men of us all — for certainly he realizes it takes real men to win consistently in the NFL and to win in the game of life."

An active member of the Christian Fellowship of Athletes, as is ex-teammate Bill Curry, Dale says with obvious sincerity, "I am thankful for being with the Packers and having a great, well-rounded man as coach."

One of the Packer major-domo's premier coach pupils, the Pittsburgh Steelers' Bill Austin, is another who freely acknowledges the impact of the Lombardian influence upon his career.

"Vince teaches the philosophy of giving 100 per cent of yourself all the time and that, if you do, you will be successful, whether the endeavor is football or what-have-you," says Austin, who last season rescued the Steelers from the NFL's Eastern Conference dungeon as a freshman head coach with a similar show of dedication.

"He emphasizes that if you want something badly enough, you can get it if you try, but there has to be the want for it. Desire, dedication and singleness of purpose are the key items in his philosophy."

How did the Packers' indefatigable molder of champions develop his unique approach to coaching? Col. Earl (Red) Blaik, the man Lombardi credits with exerting the most potent influence upon his career, delved into this subject at length in introducing his former assistant at a New York dinner in May, following presentation of the Insignis Medal to Lombardi by his alma mater, Fordham University.

In his moving description of the complex Brooklyn native who served as his aide at Army for six years, Blaik touched upon one factor which often is overlooked, home influence. Lombardi was blessed, he said, in having "a father and mother who taught him that the rewards of life are not easy to come by; that hard work, earning his way, tolerance, personal discipline, respect for parental authority, regard for learning, as well as dedication to a family and a religious faith, were expected of him."

Continuing his analysis, the colonel noted, "The paradox of his national prominence as today's most able and successful coach lies in the fact that to gain this recognition he was forced to go West. He did not get it here in the East. There, against insuperable odds, he has made Green Bay the acknowledged pattern of national football success."

"Now what is the measure of your honored guest? Well, it is no easy task to catalog this man, as he is one of seeming contradictions."

"He is volatile and of a temper which he controls like a thermostat. But he is also mellow and rich with an affection that he shares with players, friends and, on occasion, with rivals," Blaik declared.

"He is a demanding fundamentalist, intolerant of those who fail to meet their own potential. But he is also a tireless teacher who respects the intellect and spares no effort to make a Bart Starr into the great quarterback he is today."

"He is motivated to success, to win if you will, not for personal glory but rather for the personal satisfaction that comes with great accomplishment."

Proceeding with his portrait, Blaik added, "He is strong-willed, fearless, of great candor and, on occasion tactless. But he is never one to state, 'I was misquoted.' He also is capable of warm fellowship but believes strongly that respect is the essential ingredient that cements successful human relations."

"And with it all, he is strictly a human guy with an infectious personality — moody at times but always buoyed by proud family ties, unfailing dedication to his friends, to his church and to his high principles."

Football players and coaches are not the only ones who have come to realize that Lombardi, a man whose philosophical utterances have become almost as famous as his lustrous coaching record, is a man apart. Not long ago, he left an audience of more than 1,000 corporation executives enthralled after delivering a stirring address on leadership and discipline at an American Management Association convention in New York's Americana Hotel.

Declaring, "This is an age for heroes," he immediately captivated his audience by somberly appending, "The test of this century is whether we mistake the growth of wealth and power for the growth of strength and character. We've weakened discipline and respect for authority and let freedom of the individual predominate."

"If we would create something, we must be something," Lombardi told his awed listeners with characteristic fervor. "We make a mistake unless we keep working to win, to win, and to win."

"You all have the ability to direct but it is imperative for a leader to realize that he does not exist in the abstract. He is judged on what he does in a specific situation, and upon what others do to obtain the results that he has placed there for them to get."

"It is the obligation of people who are in authority—people with leadership ability—to see that we are awakened once more to the need to develop a strong interest in competitive spirit. Those who are in authority fail in that pursuit unless they preserve what has been an American goal—to win and to be first in whatever we do."

There is another facet to leadership, Lombardi added. "We also need followers who will accept authority. In our search for individual freedom, in struggling to liberate ourselves from ancient creeds and mores, we sometimes have idealized freedom against order."

Elaborating on this point, he asserted, "It has been the new against the old, genius against discipline, and by reducing authority—in the family, in the school, in law—we have lost discipline. Thus the freedom of the individual—too much freedom—has had an adverse effect. Human rights and freedom must be preserved, but with law and order and discipline."

Employing one of his favorite phrases, Lombardi noted that qualities of leadership begin with what he is fond of calling "mental toughness," an attribute he instilled in Bart Starr in developing the gentlemanly Alabamian into pro football's premier quarterback.

"Mental toughness includes many things," the Packer generalissimo told the executives. "It includes humility, spartanism, love, loyalty, teamwork, respect for dignity of the individual and charity."

Lombardi also described football, the sport which has been his life, as "a game which has become the symbol of what this nation's best attributes are—stamina, courage and coordinated efficiency."

In this connection, the one-time high school coach let it be known what he expects from his players. "We have God-given talents," said Lombardi, who frequently serves Sunday Mass before his athletes when the Packers are on the road, "and we are expected to use them to our fullest ability whenever we play."

"The primary problem in both business and government today," he continued, "is lack of leadership."

"Leaders no longer understand their relationship to those they lead," the 53-year-old strategist said. "People shout for independence, but they want to be led by a capable leader."

"A leader in any field must have character, and character is developed through self-discipline. A leader must be able to direct people, but he must also be able to make people willing to accept direction."

"The strength of a company or a team is in the will of the leaders. If the manager is weak-willed, the company will be poorly directed."

Lombardi's address had an electrifying effect upon his audience. A vice president of a small manufacturing concern, leaving the hotel ballroom, was heard to effervesce, "I don't know how I will feel tomorrow, but right now I feel we can take on General Motors."

Although he is ordinarily an eloquent man, Lombardi expresses his basic credo in simple terms. "I can't recall any experiences that influenced me," he says, looking back to his childhood in Brooklyn. "I just think there's a way of life. That's the way I was brought up."

"I think I developed that way of life in the process of education — through the family, the school. My training at Fordham certainly had a great influence."

"I have been very fortunate throughout my life to be associated with people who understood what I wanted, who thought the same way I did. I think, because of the way that they conducted themselves, that I did more or less the same thing."

He, in turn, is today communicating this approach to many others, the text which accompanied Fordham's Insignis award to him notes.

"By the reach of television his classroom covers a whole nation," the citation reads. "Sunday after Sunday all of us have watched him work. Untried kids and tired old men have learned from him."

"They have learned that men like Vincent Lombardi know how to fight, how to win, how to lose. Above all, they and all of us have learned that only with such men is the whole greater than its parts, that a team, a real team, is like all creations of love — a thing of wonder."

VINCE LOMBARDI SHAKES WITH PUPIL — NORB HECKER, COACH OF NEW FALCONS.

"In 'A Man For All Seasons,' Sir Thomas More advises a young friend of his to be a teacher. The young man asks, 'And if I was, who would know it?'"

"More's answer fits Vincent Lombardi, the great teacher we honor today. 'Who would know it? You, your pupils, your friends, God. Not a bad public.'"

A sellout mob in Baltimore's Memorial Stadium had come to cheer their beloved Colts with a horsey yell: "Charge!" They had come to see their blue shirts snap the Green Bay jinx.

What they saw were the champion Packers. Nothing more, nothing less.

On a rare warm but wet Saturday afternoon in December* the Packers' defense held the balance of power and preserved a 14-10 victory which clinched the National Football League's Western division championship.

This magnificent defense had withstood the pressures of the 1966 season. It had stopped the big man in the big game — Chicago's Gale Sayers, San Francisco's John Brodie—and now, Baltimore's Johnny Unitas.

In the brutal give and take of pro football the Packers had a four point lead with five minutes to play. Now Baltimore would begin its final march.

The Colts had done it with far less time and under more trying circumstances. There wasn't a man on the Baltimore squad who doubted they could do it again.

Unitas had never heard the word quit. Cooly, he moved the Colts 51 yards in seven plays and now he had a first down on the Green Bay 16-yard line.

For years Unitas had used accurate passes in vital situations. Now he went back once more time with the proven formula. But Unitas found himself stymied with his receivers well covered, so he ran up the middle. Willie Davis, who had been rushing Unitas, now was pursuing him.

Suddenly Davis caught Unitas and brought his right hand down hard on the football. It popped from Unitas' cradling right arm, bounced once in the mud and into the waiting hands of Green Bay linebacker Dave Robinson on the 11-yard line.

The Colts were ambushed within sight of the cavalry post. The running out of the clock by Zeke Bratkowski was a labor of love. The Packers, once again, had turned back the challenge of Baltimore for western division honors — just as they did in the sudden death overtime for the 1965 championship by almost the same score, 13-10.

In the cramped Packer dressing room, there was jubilation, not hysteria. The Packers had been here before.

Davis, chairman of the board of Green Bay's defense, talked happily about the big play. "I followed the play all the way," Davis explained with much delight. "I saw the receivers were covered and figured he would run and I trailed him. I wasn't going for anything but the ball. I wanted the ball. If I got him around the legs, it's just another tackle. I saw that he was carrying the ball high near his right shoulder and I grabbed the arm and pulled the ball loose. I'm positive he didn't see me coming."

"As soon as the ball popped out I was scared to death we wouldn't recover it because I didn't see anybody around. But there was Robby."

Dave Robinson was exultant, but not necessarily because he had made the key recovery. "Sure, it was a thrill," he said. "But you've got to remember what goes into a play like that. First, the secondary had all the receivers covered, so Unitas couldn't throw the pass. Then the line was rushing him, so he couldn't sit in the pocket. He had to run. Then Willie Davis went after the ball and it came to me. I just said, 'Come to Papa', and there it was."

TURNS BACK CHALLENGE OF BALTIMORE

Unitas admitted that he didn't see Davis. Of his fumble, he said he had called a down and in pattern for Jimmy Orr to run.

"When I looked for Orr I didn't think I could get the ball in there," he explained. "So I ran. I saw Ray Nitschke in front of me but he didn't bother me. I don't know who tackled me but the ball came loose when I landed on my knee."

The Packers played with some of their outstanding players out for all or part of the game. Bart Starr was cracked down from the side when he tried to scramble for a first down 10 minutes before the half. With a painful rib injury, Starr spent the second half conferring with the Green Bay scouts in the press box and advising his replacement, Bratkowski, on the sidelines.

Fuzzy Thurston, who had been nursing a bum ankle, was replaced at left guard by rookie Gale Gillingham. For a considerable part of the game Bob Jeter, a regular corner back, was out of action after a shattering head-on tackle of Tom Matte in the second period, and his place was taken by Doug Hart. And Boyd Dowler, one of the key receivers in the Green Bay short haul attack, was replaced by veteran Max McGee after he was injured in the second quarter.

The loss of a starting quarterback, guard, receiver and corner back in a game as tightly played as this could have easily destroyed a lesser team than Green Bay, but consider what the Packer replacements did:

Hart and Gillingham gave the Packers better than adequate performances. The 34 year old Bratkowski actually did a better job than Starr had done in the first half. Starr, under the savage pressure of a keyed-up Baltimore line and the hard rush of blitzing linebackers, completed seven of 15 passes for 96 yards. In his stint, Bratkowski, in a steady rain and on a field that became a mire during the second half, hit five of eight for 87 yards.

More important, Bratkowski directed the 80 yard touchdown drive in the fourth quarter that brought Green Bay its victory. The key play in this methodical march was a 21 yard pass on third and seven from the Baltimore 25-yard line.

And the pass was caught by Dowler's replacement, McGee.

Bratkowski called an audible at the line of scrimmage when the Colts made a late change in their defense. On the snap of the ball the Colts changed again and McGee, a veteran of 11 years, broke his normal pattern to avoid the strength of the new defense. He was to have run a square-out to the sideline, designed to gain eight or 10 yards, just enough for the first down.

Instead, exercising an option given all Packer receivers against the fluid defenses they have faced, he broke deep over the center. Only an experienced quarterback can react to such a shift in a receiver's pattern. Bratkowski, back pedaling furiously under the threat of a Baltimore blitz, read McGee's move perfectly and hit him with the smallest of split seconds to spare on the Baltimore four. Elijah Pitts got the winning touchdown two plays later with a run over right guard.

Pitts also scored Green Bay's first touchdown, on a 42 yard pass play in collaboration with Starr after Willie Wood's interception of Unitas' first pass of the game had placed the Packers in Colt territory.

Baltimore scored all 10 of its points in less than a minute and a half midway through the second quarter. Alvin Haymond's 53 yard return of Don Chandler's missed field goal triggered a 47 yard drive in six plays. Unitas' passes to Tony Lorick and Matte set up Lorick's one yard plunge. Left footed Lou Michaels added the extra point, then kicked a 26 yard field goal one minute, 23 seconds later after Barry Brown had recovered a fumble by Donny Anderson on the ensuing kick-off.

The Colts were crushed. Coach Don Shula had little to say, but Ordell Braase, who led the rush on Starr, did.

"It's funny about Green Bay," said Braase. "They don't overpower you, or manhandle you anymore. In fact, physically, I thought we had the better of them. But they always seem to get the big play and put a few more points on the board than you do. You've got to give them credit."

Jimmy Orr, the flanker back, said it a little differently.

"They do it with that defense," he said. "They've got those linebackers and no one should have that much talent. They never do anything fancy, but they don't make mistakes. They just keep working away until something develops. It always does."

To Vince Lombardi, it was the way football is supposed to be played. "It was a hard but clean game," said the Packer leader. "You didn't see a lot of penalties. You saw a lot of football."

PACKERS LEAD 30-GAME COLT SERIES

The Packers' five straight victories over the Colts, starting in 1965, enabled them to take a 17-13 lead in the all-time series. In addition, the Packers have been able to catch up in points after the 56-0 lacing Green Bay took in Baltimore in 1958. The Packers have scored 694 points in the 30-game series, the Colts 691. Here are the scores:

THIS GAME HAD EVERYTHING

By CHUCK JOHNSON
Milwaukee Journal

The prospect of playing the championship game in the Cotton Bowl might have discouraged a lesser team than the Packers.

After all, in their last two previous meetings with the Dallas Cowboys there, they had been held without a touchdown, in 21-12 and 21-3 defeats. In the 1965 exhibition, Don Chandler had kicked four field goals; in the 1966 pre-season game, he had kicked one. But no touchdowns.

And then there was the weather the week before the game. No one expected it to be good for football practice in Green Bay, so Coach Vince Lombardi had decided on Tulsa, Okla., as the place for workouts.

And so the Packers went to Tulsa, only to be greeted by a blizzard. Sub-freezing temperatures and a frozen practice field dogged them all week. Chandler, as the only Packer who qualified as a member of Tulsa's junior chamber of commerce, was ribbed unmercifully about his home town.

Lombardi was not too concerned. "It would be different if it were the start of the season," he said. "We've been playing for four months. If we lose, it won't be the weather that beats us."

Chandler had not had a good season kicking, but he allowed in Tulsa that he would be satisfied even if he didn't kick a field goal against the Cowboys. "Five extra points will be just fine," he said, not knowing how close to prophecy he would come.

Green Bay's defense had led the National Football League in things that really counted, including restricting the opposition's scoring, and so the game shaped up as one of defense.

Tom Landry, the Dallas coach who was a fellow assistant coach with Lombardi on the New York Giants, was rather proud of the way his defense had operated against Green Bay.

This included the last league meeting of the two teams, in Milwaukee County Stadium in 1965. Green Bay won, 13-3, but the Packers' only touchdown was set up by their defense, not their offense. Green Bay recovered a fumble on the Dallas eight yard line, and fullback Jim Taylor swept around right end for the touchdown on the very next play.

Rain greeted the Packers when they flew into Dallas two days before the game, but Lombardi remained nonplussed.

"They're very hospitable in Tulsa and Dallas," he quipped. "They even brought our weather down here to make us feel at home."

And when the coaches were interviewed by the press that afternoon at league headquarters, Lombardi predicted something about the game itself.

"It probably comes down to this," he said. "If Starr has a real hot day, we'll win it. If Meredith has a real hot day, they'll probably win it."

The weather on game day was ideal — sunny, warm. The kick-off was delayed because the American Football league's championship game was being played in Buffalo the same day, and the timing was such that the telecasts were not to conflict, even though they were on different networks. So the game at Dallas started in sunshine and ended under the lights.

The experts had agreed ahead of time that since the Cowboys had absolutely no previous championship game experience, it was imperative that they get away to a good start.

Bart Starr didn't wait long to test the Dallas defense. Halfback Elijah Pitts, Paul Hornung's replacement, burst through a big hole over right tackle on the first play and sped into Dallas territory. A few plays later, Starr threw a pass to Pitts, who spun away from three would be tacklers and over the goal. Chandler's first conversion made it 7-0.

Twelve seconds later, the Packers had doubled their lead. Mel Renfro fumbled the kick-off when hit by Bob Brown and Gale Gillingham, two of Green Bay's prize rookies, and Jim Grabowski, another first year man of great promise, picked up the fumble and ambled 18 yards into the end zone.

Grabowski was commended on his quick work and good hands in picking up the ball on the run.

AN EXCITING DAY . . .

(from the Commissioner in the Dallas — Green Bay program)

In 1958, Green Bay's record was 1-10-1. In 1960, just seven seasons ago, Dallas won no games, lost 11 and tied one.

Today these teams meet for the National Football League championship, and in doing so they amplify the fact that in this game the improbable is very possible.

The Dallas Cowboys, by becoming the first expansion team to win a title, have dignified the meaning of expansion. They have won because they have been coached and managed and have competed in the finest NFL tradition, and they are bringing due tribute to an excellent city.

The Cowboys started without a draft, and they have overcome early obscurity to become the proud representatives of an entire region of the country.

So this is an exciting day for the Cowboys and for Dallas; it is an exciting day for Green Bay and for the Packers; it is an exciting day for all of us in professional football. And to all our fans who make days like this possible, please accept my sincere thanks.

NUMBER TEN

The Packers now have won more National Football League championship games than any other team.

Green Bay's 34-27 victory over Dallas Jan. 1, 1967, was the Packers' seventh league championship, thus passing the Bears who have won six. The Packers have won 10 league championships in all, starting with the 1929-30-31 sweep, which was held before championship playoffs were started in 1933. The Bears are next with nine. Green Bay won titles in playoffs in 1936, 1939, 1944, 1961, 1962, 1965 and 1966.

Until the new world competition with the American Football League started, the NFL champion was automatically designated as "world champion." Now, the world champion, starting with the Jan. 15, 1967 Super Bowl game between Green Bay and Kansas City, is the winner of the NFL-AFL game.

Here are NFL championship-game standings, starting in 1933 when the league split into divisions and then held a championship game between the two division champions:

"I'm glad I didn't have time to think about it, or I might have fouled it up," he said.

If Dallas was discouraged by such a start—the Cowboys still hadn't had the ball for a scrimmage play—it was not evident. With two quick drives, the Cowboys tied the score, as running backs Dan Reeves and Don Perkins found holes in Green Bay's usually stingy defense.

The tie, however, was short lived, for 35 seconds later, Starr arched a long pass which somehow eluded the leaping Cornell Green's outstretched arms and settled into Carroll Dale's hands for a 51-yard touchdown. Lee Roy Jordan, Dallas linebacker, said that he was so sure that Green was going to intercept that he had started back up-field to block for him.

Two field goals by Danny Villanueva, one before the half and early in the second half, cut Green Bay's lead to a point, but again Starr began cutting the Dallas defense to ribbons.

First he connected with Boyd Dowler for a 16 yard touchdown, but Dowler was hurt after he crossed the goal when he was sent flying by Mike Gaechter's tackle. Starr had to pull Taylor away and lead him off the field to stop him from retribution against the Dallas safety man.

Now Starr made the big play on third down and long yardage time after time, finally connecting with Max McGee, Dowler's replacement, for 28 yards and another touchdown.

Chandler, who had had a field goal blocked earlier, had his chance for his fifth extra point—just what he had asked for. But he muffed it, and the ball didn't get over the linemen. So Dallas was only 14 points—two touchdowns—behind, instead of 15 points. That very nearly was the turning point.

On third and 20, Meredith wound up and found Frank Clarke, the Beloit (Wis.) native, alone behind Green Bay's defense, and bingo—68 yards and touchdown.

Suddenly the Cowboys were only seven points behind, and they forced a rushed punt of 16 yards by Chandler. Again Meredith completed a pass to Clarke, and then the Packers were called for interference, and Dallas had first down on the two yard line.

Reeves made a yard on first down, but then Meredith may well have outsmarted himself. Instead of sending Reeves or Perkins into the middle again, he chose to roll-out. Tackle Jim Boeke rose up too quickly and was called for illegal procedure, and end Pettie Norman dropped the pass anyway. The five yard penalty put Dallas back on the six.

Reeves, stunned by a collision on the last play, dropped a pass on second down, and then Meredith found Norman on the one for a near touchdown. Safety man Tom Brown tackled him on the ground, before Norman struggled into the

The Historic

By LEE REMMEL
Green Bay Press-Gazette

In wintry New York, which had no civic stake in the matter at hand, a soaring fever swept the concrete canyons of Manhattan and adjoining boroughs on the momentous Sunday afternoon of January 15, 1967.

"It's impossible," a frustrated Brooklyn housewife cried. "He's obsessed with watching all those big lugs on the idiot box, and I'm obsessed in the exact opposite way. Blah."

Elsewhere, in a pub on Third Avenue in customarily blasé Gotham, a veteran bartender ungrammatically exclaimed, "I never seen so much excitement . . . I'm 47 years old, I know sports for 30 years. I never seen so much excitement."

The same tension, spectacular TV ratings subsequently were to elo-quently attest, prevailed in virtually every corner of the land — and with abundant reason.

It was THE DAY — biggest, in a historical sense, in the arenas of professional sports since the dawn of the 20th century, when baseball's National League faced the fledgling American League in the very first World Series.

This, of course, was pro football's version of that now distant confrontation, the baptismal Super Bowl, staged in the cavernous Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, where the tradition-rich Packers bore the venerable National Football League's colors into combat against the Kansas City Chiefs of the infant American Football League beneath a benevolent California sun.

Only the "live" house, barely two-thirds of capacity with 63,036 customers in the seats, intruded a discordant note during this otherwise memorable production, staged amid pageantry unmatched in play-for-pay history, which saw the Packers append another glittering page to the most lustrous annals in the game before a record TV audience of some 65 millions.

The inevitable electricity of that historic hour must have communicated itself even to Vince Lombardi's battle-tested warriors, veterans of many a pressure game and fresh from thwarting the onrushing Dallas Cowboys in the final minute of play to forge a second consecutive NFL championship — their 10th in 47 seasons.

Although they ultimately asserted the establishment's superiority, 35-10, with an irresistible second half surge, there was many a fretful moment before that salutary renaissance came to pass.

"A little flatfooted" by their own admission during those first 30 minutes, the Packers carried a highly precarious 14-10 lead into the dressing room at intermission and, back in snowbound Green Bay, the natives were exceedingly restless.

Some of the principals later ascribed those temporary troubles to excessive caution, others to the psychological burden imposed by the responsibility of representing the NFL's 40-odd years of tradition, but cherubic Willie Wood, the all-pro defensive back whose dramatically opportune interception abruptly swung the balance to the Pack early in the third quarter, had another explanation.

"We were so surprised, it caught us a little flatfooted in the first half," he confessed with a faintly sheepish smile. "We had to do a lot of regrouping between halves. These things happen sometimes and you need a little coaching to get it back."

"In the second half, we were slashing, cutting loose, playing the type of defense the Green Bay Packers are noted for."

THE PRE-GAME HANDSHAKE BY THE CAPTAINS MAKES THE MERGER OFFICIAL. THEY ARE WILLIE DAVIS (87) AND BOB SKORONSKI OF THE PACKERS AND JERRY MAYS (75) AND JON GILLIAM OF THE CHIEFS.

THE FIRST WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP TROPHY — SUITABLY ENGRAVED.

It all had begun routinely enough for the eventual world champions, who winged 80 yards in six plays to mount a 7-0 lead early in the first quarter with the aid of some cinematic heroics by the delightfully nonchalant Max McGee.

The deceptively languid flanker, summoned from a shady niche on the Coliseum bench when Boyd Dowler re-injured his right shoulder on the Pack's first offensive series, launched a memorable afternoon at the expense of the Chiefs' befuddled Willie Mitchell in collecting that charter Super Bowl touchdown.

Reaching back with enviable aplomb to execute a dazzling one-handed catch just behind Mitchell's straining fingers on the Kansas City 21-yard line, McGee whirled goalward as the lunging Mitchell sprawled to the turf in his wake and cruised from there into the end zone without being touched.

The Taxi had hardly crossed the goal line when NFL loyalists in the press box, confident their predictions of a cakewalk were now en route to fulfillment, began to nod wisely and settle back comfortably to watch the carnage they were convinced would follow.

The flamboyant Chiefs, resplendent in red and white silks, did not share this view, it shortly developed. With Len Dawson at the controls, they forged four successive first downs following the next kickoff before settling for a 40-yard field goal attempt by ex-Minnesota Viking Mike Mercer, which went awry.

Then, after inducing the Packers to punt, they startled more than a few of those 63,036 customers—not to mention the NFL faithful—by barging 66 yards to score in six plays, rare accomplishment against the tightfisted repeating champions of the senior circuit.

Even more alarming than the tie-producing push itself was the manner in which it was achieved. Dawson ignited the drive with a 17 yard pass to the highly elusive Mike Garrett, then engineered another first down with three stabs at the Packers' vaunted front four, good for 11 yards, before pitching a 31 yard strike to the heralded Otis Taylor which swept the resurgent Chiefs to the Green Bay 7 yard line.

On the very next play, another play-action pass, Dawson's wizardry befuddled the Packer resistance. When he retreated to throw, there was not a single defender within range of his fullback, Curtis McClinton, and the Purdue alumnus found him in the left corner of the end zone to register the first points ever scored by an AFL entry against a member of the long established NFL.

Typically, the Packers did not permit this contretemps to shatter their composure. Retaliation, in fact, was spectacularly swift. They "scored" in just three plays, Starr lofting a third down and one pass into the arms of fleet Carroll Dale, who had cantered into daylight beyond the Chiefs' harried Fred Williamson. The rest was incredibly easy.

Unfortunately, however, a Pack-

A THANK YOU...

(from the Commissioner in the Super Bowl program)

The outcome, the technical insights, the "ifs," the "might have beens" of this world championship football game are something you will read about tomorrow and for years to come.

The drama, the color, the spectacle of this game are things you will see.

The meaning, the feeling of this game you will experience in your own way just as the players, the coaches, the club presidents and others will.

It is not for me, nor for anyone else in professional football to tell you about any of these aspects of this long-awaited game.

Rather, I would simply like to thank you—and the many other professional football fans throughout the country—for wanting this game, for supporting it and caring about its outcome.

And further, on behalf of the Kansas City Chiefs, the Green Bay Packers and the other 23 clubs now in major professional football, I would like to pledge that we all will make every effort to surpass this historic sports event in the seasons to come.

er interior lineman was detected illegally in motion and the electrifying maneuver was recalled, leaving Vince Lombardi's athletes 73 yards distant.

Again shrugging off adversity, they proceeded to get that one back—although in more methodical fashion. Exhibiting his now famous "third down" artistry, Starr escorted the NFL champions to pay dirt in 11 plays, firing an 11 yard pass to McGee, a 15 yard pitch to Dale and a 16 yarder to Marv Fleming, who made a leaping catch, in third down situations to launch the drive.

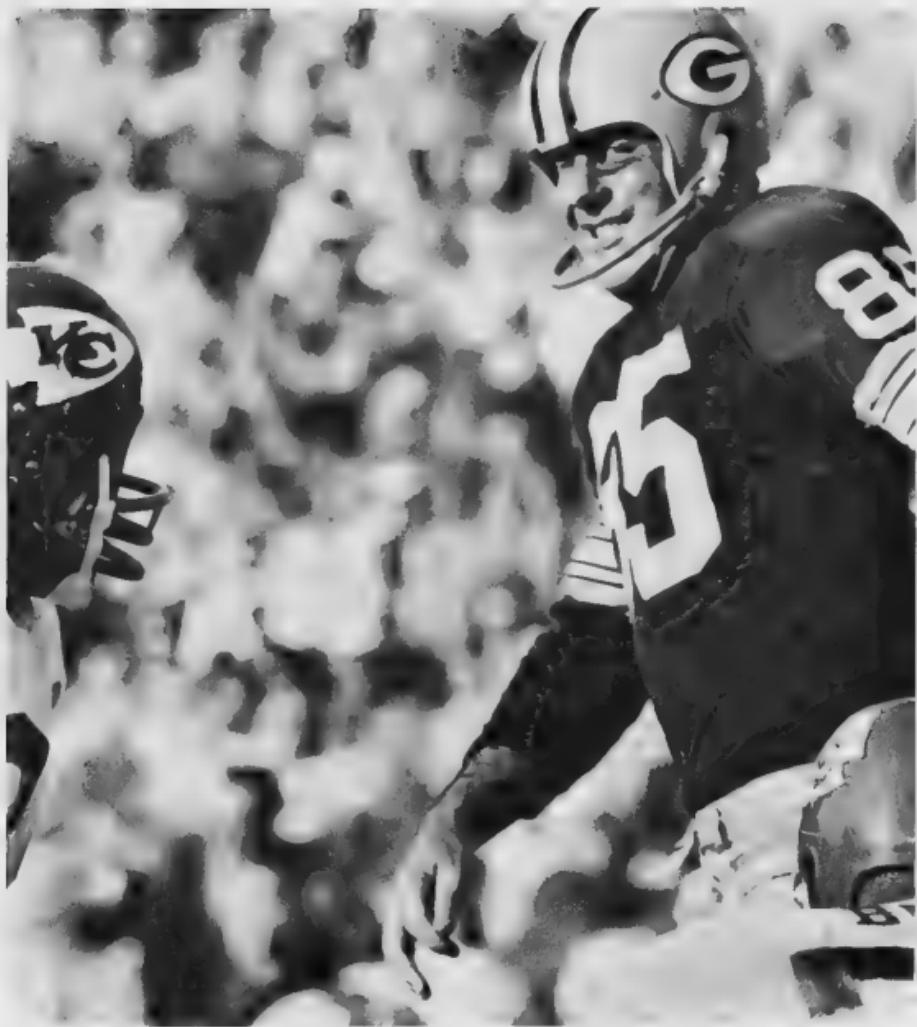

These maneuvers carried the Pack to the Chiefs' 27 where, when it shortly appeared the drive might flounder, the eminently resourceful Starr again worked his third down magic.

This time, after successive strikes to his flanker, split end and tight end, the sharpshooting Alabamian extricated himself and his colleagues from a third and 7 situation by firing a 10 yard bullet to half-back Elijah Pitts for yet another first down.

Swiftly changing his tactics, the NFL's most valuable player next called for the famed "Lombardi Sweep" and Jim Taylor veered left to daylight, then cruised the remaining 14 yards behind a pair of incisive blocks by his longtime Guardian Angels, Fuzzy Thurston

"How's That, Fellas?"

A new World Championship Record Book was started with all figures compiled on the field of battle in the first Super Bowl game. They will be separate from the records of the National Football league's championship game.

One of the "world" marks that could stand for a long time is Max

McGee's seven pass receptions. Filling in for the injured Boyd Dowler, McGee turned the catches from Bart Starr into 138 yards and two touchdowns.

McGee is shown above flashing a smile at a couple of Chiefs after catching a 37-yard pass for the touchdown that gave Green Bay a 7-0 lead. Maxie later caught a 13-yard TD pass from Starr to set the score at 23-10.

Another mark due for a long stand is Starr's efficiency rating of 69.5 per cent on 16 completions in 23 pass attempts. He turned the completions into 250 yards and two TDs.

and Jerry Kramer.

Still confident at this point, the obstreperous young Chiefs emphatically declined to concede. With Dawson alarmingly on target — he passed twice to Chris Burford for 11 and 27 yards — they flew to the Green Bay 30, where the Packers closed ranks and forced a fourth-and-one situation. Shrugging off the fans' boisterous pleas to "go, go," the Chiefs settled for a 31 yard field goal by Mercer.

This left the Packers with a highly tenuous 14-10 lead at the intermission — and their faithful fanatics with more than a modicum of apprehension. But better things were to come — after a splendidarious ($30,000) halftime production highlighted by two abbreviated "space man" flights, the discharge of thousands of balloons and the release of hundreds of homing pigeons, which fluttered off into the smog over the rim of the Coliseum in breathtaking formation.

Wood's spectacular breakthrough came as the threatening Chiefs reached midfield with the second half kickoff. Badly rushed by the Pack's front four, Dawson hurriedly fired in the direction of tight end Fred Arbanas, venturing into the flat.

The pass was short, however, and as Arbanas whirled to retreat for the ball, Wood wheeled past him and gathered it in on the Packer 45. Breaking to the middle, and then cutting back to his right, the elusive USC alumnus maneuvered to the KC five before he was grounded.

Before the stunned Missourians could recover, Pitts had burst over left tackle into the end zone behind a power block by Capt. Bob Skoronski — and the Packers had, in effect, wrapped up the first Super Bowl championship.

With Starr concentrating on a bewildered Mitchell, who watched helplessly as the imperturbable McGee collected seven passes for 138 yards over the route, pro football's first true world champions subsequently registered two more touchdowns, one on a casual catch by McGee from 13 yards out in the

PAUL AND PETER DAVID OF GREEN BAY SPELL IT OUT WITH BLOCKS.

Farewell to Green Bay

By

PAUL HORNUNG

I guess I'm no different than anyone else. I didn't really like the idea of being drafted by Green Bay back in 1957. If I could have had a choice, I would have wanted to sign with the Chicago Bears. But Green Bay? Well, at that time, Green Bay was the so-called Siberia of football.

But I wanted to play pro football and under the draft system, I didn't have a choice. So I actually signed my contract quite happily.

After two years, though, I wanted out. I wanted to be part of another team. I wanted to be traded. We were losing and it wasn't easy playing in Green Bay. The only differences I ever had with Coach Lisle Blackbourn were that I wanted to play more and not be shifted around every week. Scooter McLean was a great guy but we just didn't have any luck with him.

Yes, at that time I was hoping I would be traded.

But the rest is history. The most satisfying thing in sports is winning and that's what we did under Vince Lombardi. He came to Green Bay and everything changed. He taught us not only how to win but why . . . and that's important.

It was a real honor to have played under Coach Lombardi. He's a great influence on anyone who plays for him. And contrary to what a lot of people believe, Lombardi and I were never at odds. I'd say we were very good friends. He understood me and I understood him. When I didn't play, there was a good reason for it. I wasn't in his doghouse.

It's only because of Lombardi that I can now look back at my 10 years in Green Bay and recall some wonderful experiences. A lot of people ask about particular thrills. I've always said any athlete in professional sports . . . football, basketball, baseball . . . who can look back at the end of his career at having been a part of a one world championship team . . . well, he's above the average.

I've been in five world championship games and that has to be the highlight of my years in football. It's a wonderful thing to be a part of one world championship team, much less four of them.

Each one of those championship games is very dear to me. I remember setting a championship game record by scoring 19 points against the Giants in Green Bay in 1961. But I think the one I remember best is the 1962 game against the Giants in New York. That was the toughest game I've ever been in. It wasn't so bad in the second half because we were all too frozen to feel anything. You will remember that was the day of the wind, cold and ice when Jerry Kramer kicked three field goals and we won, 16-7. The first half was the hardest hitting game I ever played in. But in the second half we just wanted to win and get it over with.

Going back over the years in Green Bay, though, I guess my best games were against Baltimore. I always looked forward to playing the Colts. They were always tough but it seemed our offense was just geared for them. At least from my halfback position it appeared that way. I can't forget the 33 points I scored against the Colts in 1961, which is a Packer record. Those points came on four touchdowns, six extra points and one field goal.

And then in 1965, I was fortunate enough to score five touchdowns for 30 points against the Colts, which probably should stand out even more in my memory because I almost duplicated that 33 even though I wasn't kicking anymore.

I love scoring points. I won't deny that. And so the 176 points I made in 1960, which is a league record, has to be a real highlight of my days in Green Bay.

But when it comes right down to the most satisfying game I ever had with the Packers, I guess I would have to pick the opening game of the 1964 season against the Bears. That was my first official game after the year's suspension. I'll never forget that feeling as I stood out there waiting for the kickoff signal. I was back.

And as it turned out, it was quite a memorable debut . . . or re-debut. I think a lot of Packer fans will remember that day too because that's the game in which I kicked a 52-yard field goal on a free kick and I guess nobody, including a lot of the Bears, really knew what was going on. But it helped us beat the Bears, 23-12, and it left me feeling like one of the boys again.

The year before that had been a rough one on me. I had been suspended for gambling . . . and I deserved it. But knowing that didn't make it any easier to accept. Only the reaction of my friends and the fans helped me through that lonely year.

I remember returning to Green

Bay to watch an exhibition game from the stands. I was introduced over the public address system and the cheers really did something for me. And I remember appearing at a store promotion in Madison that year. About 5,000 kids turned out and they were wonderful. Everywhere I went in Wisconsin, the people accepted me. It was really wonderful.

Memories like these make it hard to leave Green Bay, Wisconsin and the Packers. I made a lot of wonderful friends all over the state and a lot of guys I played with when I first came up are still living there.

I'll miss the affiliation with the ball players as friends and as teammates. I knew every move and every trait of the guys playing with me in Green Bay. And that's a big help. I could almost feel the play when Bart would call it. It's hard to think of yourself playing on a new team. You just don't know your teammates . . . on the field, I mean. It takes years to get that close feeling.

But going to New Orleans is a challenge for me. And, in all honesty, it is an opportunity for me too. I've always wanted to get into radio and television and this I will be able to do in New Orleans with a show of my own.

Everything considered, though, it's going to be a strange feeling.

I'll miss Green Bay and the Packers.

CARROLL DALE (84) ESCORTS MARV FLEMING ON TOUCHDOWN RUN AGAINST LIONS.

TWO DIFFERENT HORSES

By TERRY BLEDSOE
Milwaukee Journal

Carroll Dale: A lightning escape through the San Francisco 49ers secondary, a momentary stretch to haul down Bart Starr's lofted pass, a headlong flight into the end zone.

Marv Fleming: A sure handed reception of a short pass, a staggering, stubborn assault on a defensive back, a lurching touchdown trip downtown, with Minnesota Vikings defender Dale Hackbart riding high on his back, like a mahout struggling futilely to bring a bull elephant under control.

These are the 1966 images of two of the major horses in Vince Lombardi's stable — Fleming, the mighty Clydesdale; Dale, the graceful walking horse from Bristol, Tenn.

Each is an offensive end of considerable talent; each brings to the Packers a special credential, a special value.

They are not parallel talents, certainly, for there is much to contrast between the two. Dale, the flanker, and Fleming, the tight end, provide a rich field for comparison.

Dale, one of the best combinations of sheer speed and sure footed finesse in the National Football league, has been dealing with the press for seven pro years now; he expresses himself easily and well.

Fleming is an almost classic example of the strong silent type: He is strong on the field and silent off it, and as his burgeoning talents began in 1966 to place him more and more in the line of postgame questions, he squirmed and stammered, as embarrassed by the attention as a school boy on the honor roll.

He caught a short pass against the Detroit Lions in October, shrugged a tackle by Bruce Maher like lesser men brush aside friendly puppies and fled 53 yards into the end zone.

And afterward, when asked about it, he studied his feet, cleared his throat, and said finally, "I just ran for daylight," a cliché worth only for the plug it gave the boss' book.

But Fleming did nicely without conversation on the field. After a year of close competition with Bill Anderson, he seemed at last to have won the job.

When Ron Kramer played out his option and became a free agent in May of 1965, it was Fleming, then a second year man, who was counted upon to replace him. It didn't work out that way, though. Anderson was brought out of a year's retirement, and late in the season was the regular. He seemed to be the regular at the start of the 1966 season, too.

But it didn't work out that way, either, for somewhere along the line, Marv Fleming changed his attitude, or his outlook, or perhaps merely matured. He began catching the passes which heavy traffic had caused him to drop and began running more precise pass routes.

Lombardi, himself, paid him a compliment whose dimensions are measurable in terms of the man who paid it: "He is our most improved player," the coach said. He was also at last a tight end with a future, and a creditable successor to Ron Kramer. He caught 31 passes for 361 yards, totals which can be mentioned easily with Kramer's average as a Packer of 33 catches for about 550 yards.

And it turned out that Fleming didn't have to talk, for as he improved in his job others turned up to do it for him. Wayne Walker, the Detroit Lions' linebacker, was one.

With the wisdom of a veteran who had seen Fleming come into the league and grown older while Fleming grew up, Walker put it one:

"He's thinking more out there now. It used to be you could do things against him, but now he's a lot smarter. That comes with experience.

"He used to set up too high to block on the sweeps. You could grab him by the arms and run him right back into the play.

"No more. He's learned."

Dale had learned long before; his apprenticeship was served with the Los Angeles Rams, and when he came to the Packers for the 1965 season it was as a proven veteran, at the top of his game and seeking new challenges.

"I had five years with a loser and I don't ever want to lose again," he said then. "I'd rather be with Green Bay, just member of the squad, than be with a loser and have a great year individually."

"I wanted to be traded so bad I didn't care where they sent me. When it turned out to be Green Bay I couldn't have been happier."

The Packers have shown no signs of regretting the transaction, either, for Dale has proven to be one of the finest long range striking forces in NFL history. He caught only 37 passes, thus falling six short of consideration for the league lead, but his average gain was 23.6—best in Packer annals except for the immortal Don Hutson, who averaged 24.8 in 1939 and 23.8 in 1935.

"I've always averaged pretty well on my catches," Dale said. "One thing that helps me here is our control type of game."

"We throw mostly short passes, so the defenders have got to play the percentages. They've got to play me for the short pattern, so it's sometimes a little easier to get them to 'bite' when I fake a short move and then go for the long one."

Fleming needs no such nuances, although he sometimes attempts to quickstep his way around a defensive back in an open field—rather like a truck attempting to outflank a motor scooter, instead of just driving over it.

But whatever the tactics, each gets his job done, and in fashion which is likely to delight Packer fans—not to mention quarterback Bart Starr—for seasons to come.

THE YEAR OF THE SUPER STARR

By Len Wagner
Green Bay Press-Gazette

BART STARR, WHO PASSES HIS EYE TEST WITH FLYING COLORS EVERY SEASON, HAS BEST ACCURACY IN LEAGUE—A LIFETIME 57.2 COMPLETION PERCENTAGE.

The 1966 professional football season will go down in history as the long awaited Year of the Super Bowl.

It will also be remembered as the Year of the Super Starr. For this was the year that Bart Starr bolted from the oppressive shadow of John Unitas, ripped off the frustrating label of "underrated" and became the most acclaimed football player in America.

No longer do sportswriters and sportscasters say of Starr, "He's a great quarterback, but . . ." No longer do fans speak in awe of Mickey Mantle, Bill Russell, Bobby Hull and Jimmy Brown. In 1966, the "buts" were erased and the name Bart Starr joined the ultra hero class.

Evidence of this can be found in the multitude of "Player of the Year" trophies and awards that have been rained on Starr, in the more than 700 speaking engagements he had to turn down in the three months following the Super Bowl, in the more than 30 phone calls a day that ring into the Starrs' low-slung brick home on Green Bay's southwest side, in the cardboard boxes full of fan letters that the mailmen deliver by scooter, in the flood of magazine stories that probe every phase of his life and career, in the number of products carrying his much sought after endorsement.

All this because in 1966 Bart Starr combined a brilliant personal record, including the NFL passing championship, with deft and heady leadership in such a sweet mixture that the Packers drove to their second consecutive National Football League championship and the first Super championship in pro grid history.

But to this Starr that rose from Alabama, the real evidence of his "arrival" is tucked neatly into a batch of file folders located in a basement corner of his home.

In humbly discussing the "underrated" Starr of past years with the exalted Starr of 1966, Bart pulled out two of the folders. From one he extracted two sheets of secretarial notebook paper. From another, he took 11 sheets of large size loose leaf paper.

Both were his personal versions of Packer game plans. The first was from a 1960 game . . . the second from a 1966 game. This difference, from two small sheets of paper with a smattering of notes and diagrams to 11 large sheets of paper crammed with markings in three different colors, each with its own significance, indicates the change in Bart Starr.

"We've come a long way," the Montgomery native smiled. "I was very surprised to see in the Super Bowl program that a Dallas sportswriter had said we don't have a game plan; that we just feel out the other team and then proceed as the game dictates. Actually we have a very explicit game plan for every game."

The plan . . . those 11 pages . . . is so complete and so precise that in the championship game against Dallas, the Packers' entire offense consisted of eight running plays and six pass plays. Starr calls it "the finest conceived game plan I've ever seen" and he gives full credit to Coach Vince Lombardi and his staff.

The Dallas plan was typical of all Packer game plans, though perhaps a bit more thorough because of the extra week in which to prepare. What a game plan actually amounts to is an elaborate scouting report.

Starr's plan normally begins with a breakdown on the opponent's personnel, position by position. The remarks include things like "Blank—not outstanding pass rusher but tough outside on runs; Klank—reader, goes inside when off ball, comes hard when up close; Plank—wearer than Klank, should be worked on; Glank—will quit on pass rush, prefers to jump up and bat at ball, comes in on only one of about three plays; Tlank—good defender, underrated, plays post very tough, work on zig zag; Hlank—favors outside, work inside patterns on him."

After that, each of the opponent's defenses is diagrammed with statistics showing how many times it was employed in particular situations. A note with one of the defenses says "Never blitz from this formation on third and long yardage." Another says "weak side linebacker covers inside of flood."

The next section includes a list of basic offensive plays to be used in various situations against each of the defenses. Then there is a page of general notes. Underlined for emphasis in one plan is "don't forget the reverses."

On the following page, there are diagrams and notes concerning several special plays being installed specifically for this game and the situations in which they are to be employed. After another list of special notes, there are the short yardage and goal line plays to be used and again under exactly what circumstances each should be used.

All this information is gathered from reports by scout Wally Cruice, movies and notes individual players have made over the years. And it is compiled only through hard work.

"It's absolutely amazing how well the coaches have analyzed and worked up all this by Wednesday morning," Starr says with an admiring shake of his head.

It's on that morning the players are fed the plan by the coaches, first in a general meeting, then in separate offense and defense meetings and finally in even smaller groups such as backs and ends together, linemen together, defensive backs together, etc.

Meetings the rest of the week are held to make minor alterations though the quarterbacks, who began watching movies Tuesday night, ahead of the general meeting, continue watching movies all week to make sure they will recognize any changes with reflex speed. The offensive ends spend nearly as much time before the screen so that if the defensive secondary suddenly switches, both the passer and receiver will pick it up and adjust without hesitation.

BART STARR IS MOBBED BY PRESS AFTER SUPER BOWL (LEFT) IN LOS ANGELES AND BY YOUNG COWBOY FANS AFTER NFL TITLE GAME IN DALLAS.

And therein lies the secret to success. For no matter how detailed the game plan is, Starr insists that "the real difference between winning and losing in our league is the ability to adjust."

The three time NFL passing championship recalls a game against the Vikings of a couple years ago. "They had played a standard defense all season but they changed that day and it was almost impossible to run against them. But they disguised the defense so well that it wasn't as easy to pass against them as it appeared. We really had to adjust that day."

Similarly, in the historical 1961 championship game in Lambeau Field, the Giants, who had played an "even" defense all year, opened up with an "odd" defense, putting a man directly over the center. "We had to change much of our plan that day but we eventually forced them back into their normal defense and we returned to our game plan."

All adjusting should turn out that well. The Packers won, 37-0.

It's very seldom that the Packers don't adjust rapidly because the game plan's special notes always include a brief summary of any unusual stuff the opponent may have used anytime in the past six years.

And though it may not be contained in the game plan proper, there is even special consideration given to the very first play of the game. This is usually selected by Lombardi, though sometimes only after consultation with his quarterbacks hours before the game. And the record includes the Packers have had good success on "first plays." (Note Table.)

Against Dallas, for happy instance, the opening play was a specially designed and disguised sucker play that, Starr recalls, "worked just like it was diagrammed." Elijah Pitts raced for 32 yards to the Cowboy 44 on the play, making it well worth the extra effort made to develop it.

It's this execution that, along with adjusting and defense, remains the prime ingredients in any game plan. "The defense must get the ball for you," Starr logically points out. "I remember in Milwaukee a few years ago when we had the ball for something like 12 plays in the whole first half against the 49ers. We couldn't get the ball but we still led. That's why you have to have pride of team accomplishment."

DOUBTING DAVE

By KEN HARTNETT
The Associated Press

Doubt ran deep in Dave Robinson, linebacker and engineer.

In high school in a small town near Camden, N.J., the young man of misgivings doubted that he would get to college, his escape route from poverty.

He conditioned his mind and his body and won a scholarship to Penn State.

At Penn State, he doubted that he would ever win the notice of professional football scouts. He studied all the harder. He won All-America rating. He also eventually won an engineering degree.

And after being drafted in the first round by Green Bay in 1963, he wasn't sure he would last, or would want to last, more than two or three seasons . . . 1967 will be his fifth.

In 1964, a knee injury in mid-season threatened Robinson's career. He had an operation but in 1965 he doubted the knee would hold up. It did.

Last season, the doubt diminished.

"I think he went back to playing the way he used to play," said defensive end Lionel Aldridge. "He went back to being his reckless self. He just cut loose."

And when the season was over, there was little doubt left in anyone's mind that the 26-year-old Robinson was one of the premier linebackers in professional football.

Defensive tackle Henry Jordan said: "He has exceptionally good hands, good speed and he's a good tackler. What makes a linebacker successful is being able to analyze real quickly and, if it's a run, to fill his hole and, if it's a pass, to go deep. Dave can do all this."

HAPPY DAVE ROBINSON

And all this Robinson did last season while also intercepting five passes — the most by any Packer linebacker since Charlie Brock picked off six back in 1942.

Robinson remembers most the ones that got away.

"There's a number of them I could have had but for one reason or another I just missed them," he said. "There are a number of reasons you miss interceptions and there are a number of reasons you get them too."

Cornerman Herb Adderley was one of them. "Herb complemented Dave and Dave complemented Herb," commented Jordan.

Interceptions, however, are not the stuff that Robinson's dreams are made of. He is prouder of the job he and his teammates on the left side did in turning most enemy sweep plays into exercises in frustration.

Being able to meet the run with abandon is the test of a linebacker's mettle. Taking the best block a Mike Ditka or a John Mackey can muster without yielding a little inside requires a special brand of courage.

"I've always been the type of guy who likes to mix it up," said Robinson, the youngest of nine children. "On defense, you get a chance to beat someone and on some days, not always, you really feel like coming out and beating someone."

"Sometimes a guy will say things to the press that will rile you up and you'll want to beat him. But most of the time, it's just a competitive feeling. You just want to beat them bad so they'll have a healthy respect for you."

Robinson was talking like a professional sure of his position. It wasn't always that way. "When I came to the Packers I was like a newborn baby," said Robinson. "I knew nothing."

Bill (Bubba) Forester, in his last year as a Packer, took the rookie under his wing. "Everything else was a refinement of what he taught me," Robinson said.

More refinements are ahead. "I think he was nothing short of fantastic in doing the things he did last year," said Aldridge. "Now he can start working on some of the fine points."

And this is exactly what Robinson has in mind for 1967. He would like to join fellow linebackers Lee Roy Caffey and Ray Nitschke on the All-Pro team. "You have to have a couple of good years back to back," he said. "I have to have a better year in 1967."

When Robinson says he has to do something, he usually does.

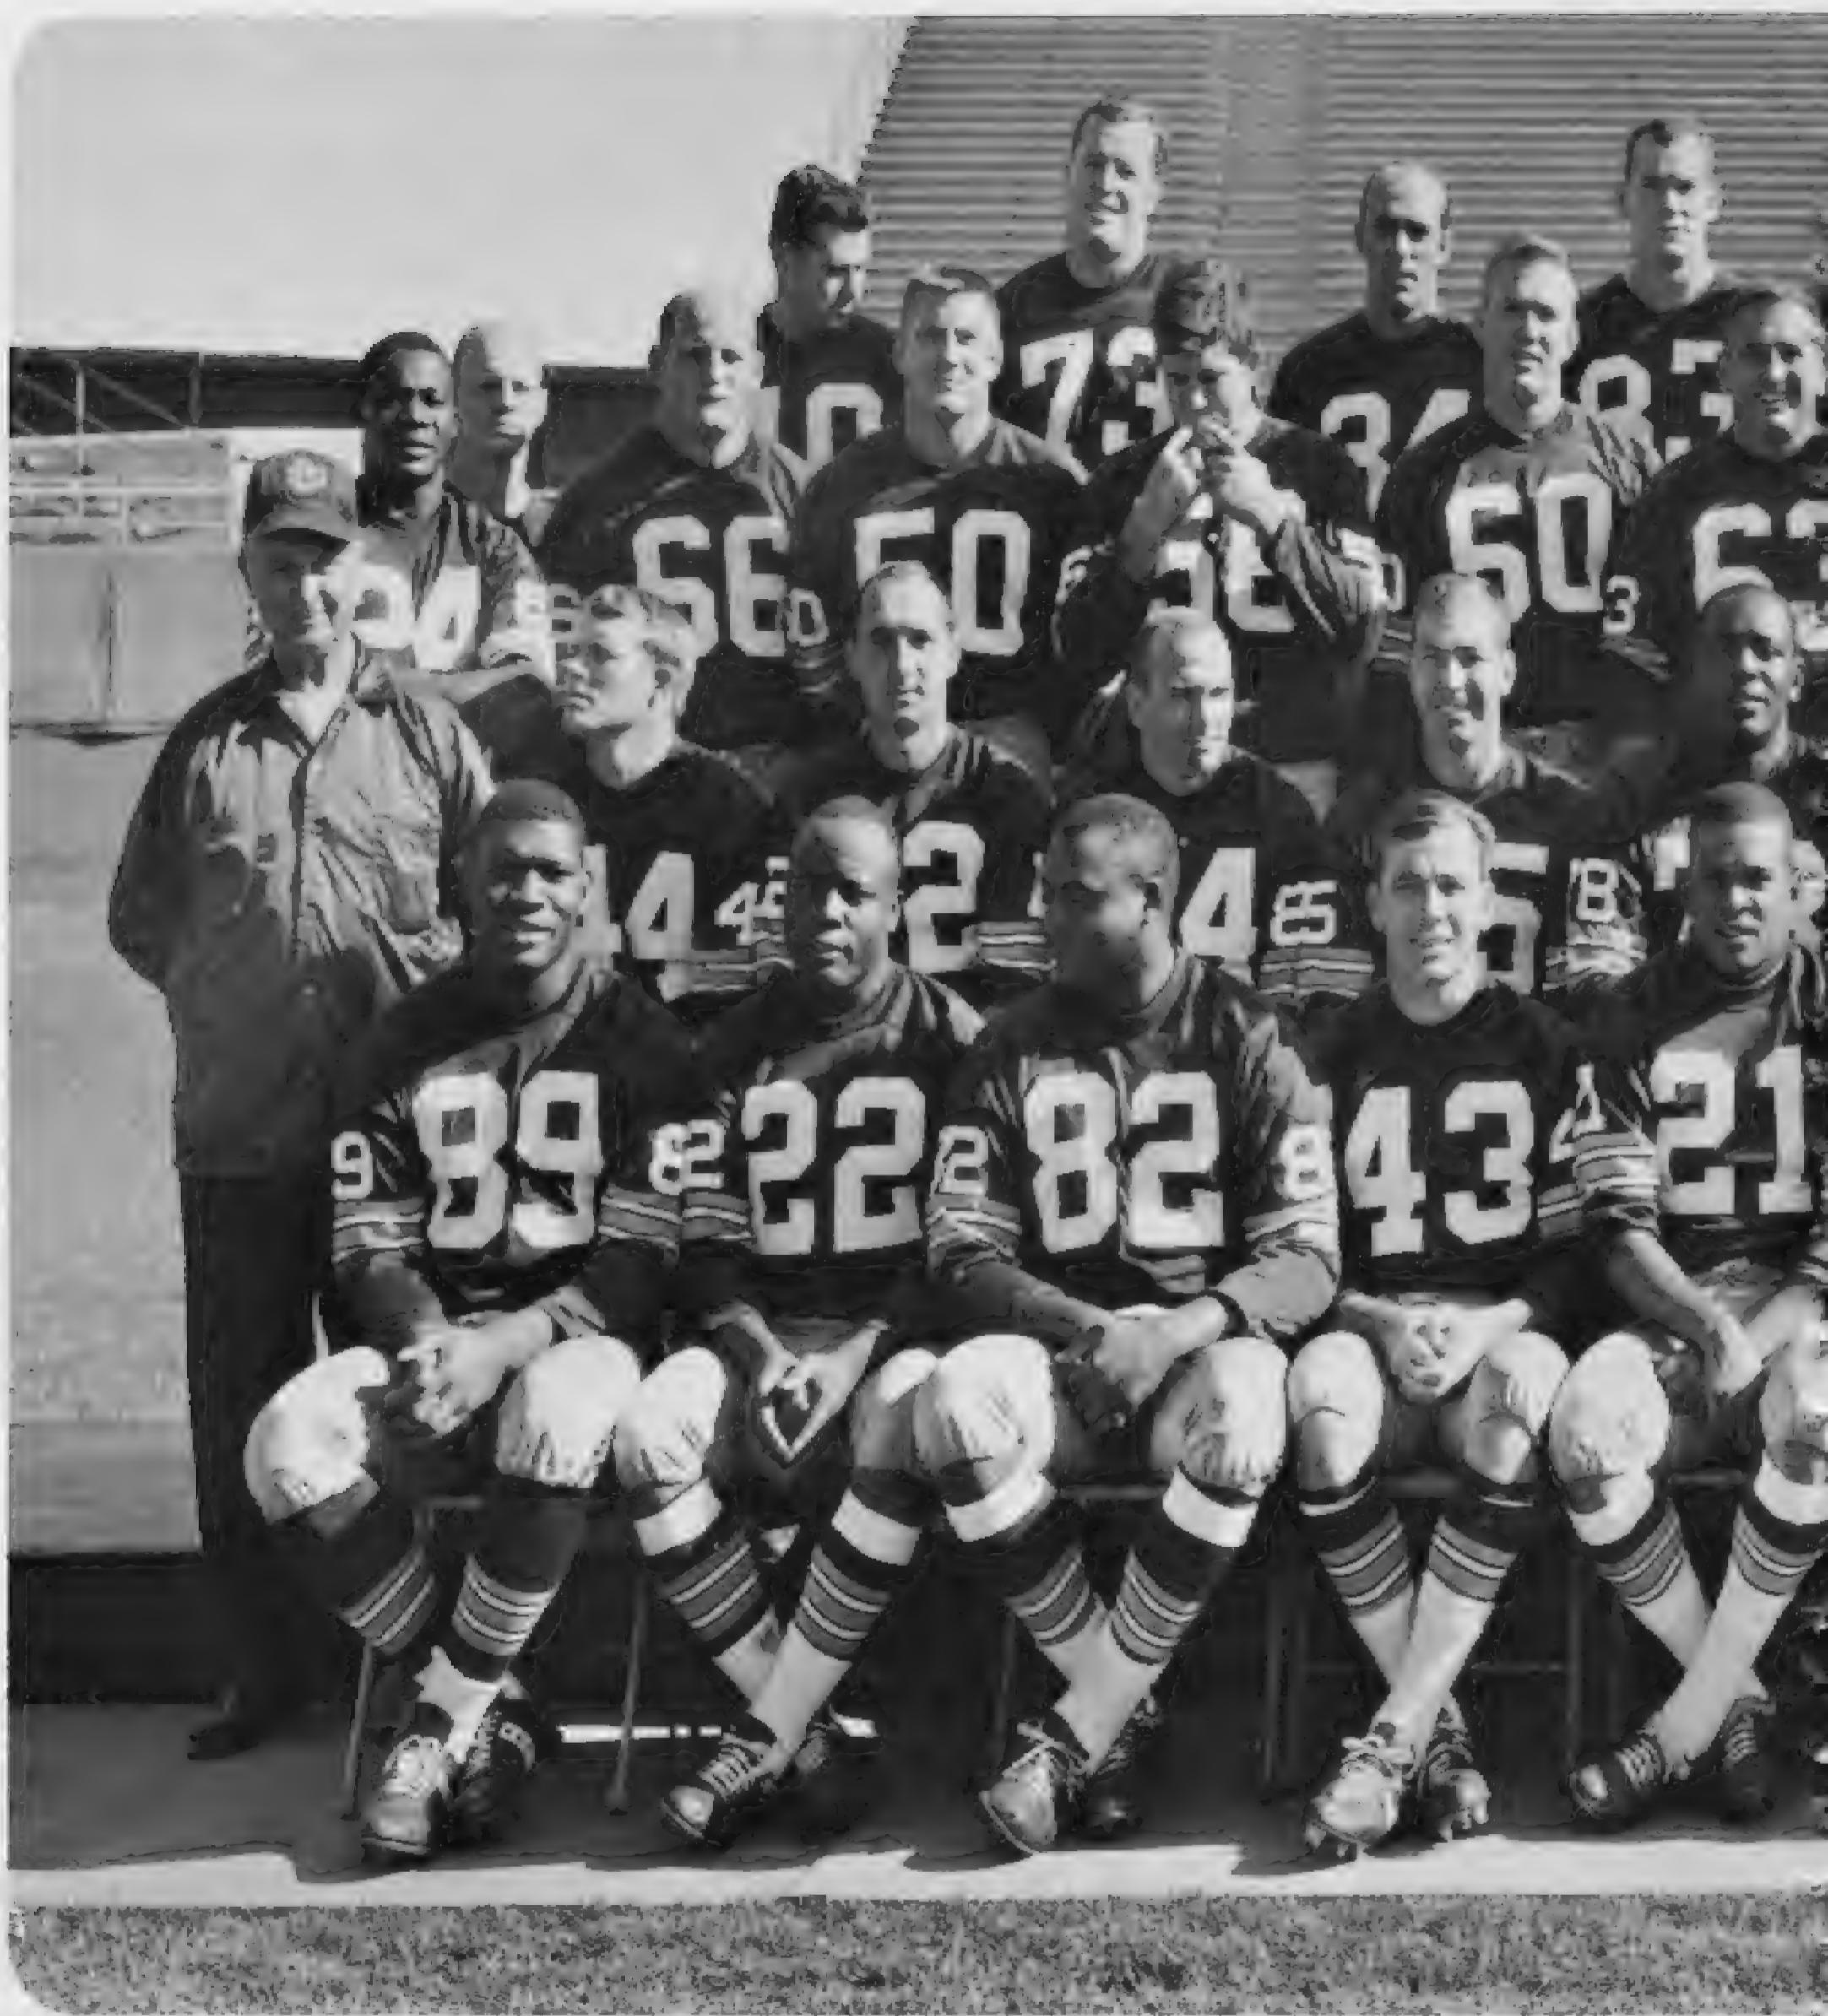

He said he had to study harder when he was a high school boy. His father died and with him went any hope of getting to college without an athletic or academic scholarship.

So Dave began a classwork campaign that produced a succession of dazzling report cards.

Good report cards were not exactly status symbols in Dave's neighborhood. He kept his hidden. But one day, a group of girls found a glittering card inside one of Dave's books and the secret was out.

"I had the hardest time in the world after that," he said.

But he kept studying.

THE STATE OF WISCONSIN

1967 Senate Joint Resolution 5

Congratulating the Green Bay Packers upon winning the world championship of professional football.

Whereas, on January 15, 1967, the Green Bay Packers won the "Superbowl" game—a game which had been billed as the professional football game of the century and a game in which, for the first time, the champion of the National Football League met the champion of the American Football League for the professional football championship of the United States: and

Whereas, the pre-eminent Packers won by a 35-10 score and clearly demonstrated that they stand by themselves at the highest level of football expertise; and

Whereas, it is fitting that the Green Bay Packers represented the National Football League in this game for the Packers are the oldest franchise in the league and the team has won more championships than any other professional football team; and

Whereas, under the most able leadership of Coach Vince Lombardi who came to Green Bay in 1959, the Packers have never finished worse than 3rd in their division, have won 5 of the last 7 divisional titles and 4 of the last 6 league championships, and at the same time have exhibited outstanding sportsmanship and have brought fame to the city of Green Bay and the state of Wisconsin; and have supported the team, located in the smallest city in either league, in a manner unsurpassed by any metropolis; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate, the assembly concurring.
That the legislature extends its sincere congratulations to the members of the Green Bay Packers football team, Coach Vince Lombardi and the citizens of Green Bay for a "super victory" and extends its best wishes for many more successful seasons. Be it further Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the City Council of Green Bay and that sufficient copies be sent to Coach Vince Lombardi for distribution to each member of the team and coaching staff.

(Signed: William P. Nugent, Senate Chief Clerk, and Harold V. Froehlich, Speaker of the Assembly)

the Best Viewed Team

The 1966 Packers had to be the best-viewed team in the history of major league sports.

An estimated 400 million fans from coast to coast saw the Packers play 21 games in the flesh or via television.

The Packers played five pre-season, 14 league and two post-season championship games in sweeping the first authentic title triple—Western Division, National League and World Championships.

Live-wise, the Packers celebrated their first million-fan season in history in a single season. They drew 292,501 in the five pre-season games and 759,282 in the 14 league games—a total of 1,051,783. The same team played before 75,504 in the league championship game in Dallas Jan. 1, 1967 and 63,036 in the world title (Super Bowl) game in Los Angeles two weeks later. This makes the live total 1,190,323.

Here are the live attendance figures for the 1966 team:

Pre-Season: All Stars at Chicago 72,000; Bears at Milwaukee 47,034; Cowboys at Dallas 75,504; Steelers at Green Bay 50,861; Giants at Milwaukee 47,102.

League: Colts at Milwaukee 48,650; Browns at Cleveland 83,943; Rams at Green Bay 50,861; Lions at Green Bay 50,861; 49ers at San Francisco 39,290; Bears at Chicago 49,573; Falcons at Milwaukee 48,623; Lions at Detroit 56,954; Vikings at Green Bay 50,861; Bears at Green Bay 50,861; Vikings at Minnesota 47,426; 49ers at Milwaukee 48,725; Colts at Baltimore 60,238;

HAPPINESS IN THE STANDS . . . THE PACKERS HAD JUST MADE A FIRST DOWN.

Rams at Los Angeles 72,416.

Championship: NFL playoff at Dallas 75,504; World playoff at Los Angeles 63,036.

All games were sellouts except the All Star game, the 49ers in San Francisco, the Rams in Los Angeles, and the world championship game in LA.

Television audiences were estimated by rating services at roughly 398 million. Ten of the 21 games were telecast nationally or semi-nationally and the others were telecast regionally—to the home territories (except the site of the game) of the two teams involved.

The top audience was 65 million for the two-network telecast of the Super Bowl. The NFL title game pulled about 45 million and the Packers' other national telecasts (both Colt games, the All Stars, both Viking games and the 49er and Ram games on the Coast) drew from 15 to 35 million each. Regional telecasts draw around 5 million each.

vate business after serving eight years as backfield coach. A former Ram back, McCormick was with the Vikings for four seasons.

Phil Bengtson, defense coach, is the lone holdover from Lombardi's original staff. Other members of that staff who have departed are Norb Hecker, Bill Austin and Tom Fears, all presently head coaches. Lombardi's present staff is composed of Dave Hanner, Bob Schneller, Jerry Burns, Ray Wietecha, Bengtson and McCormick.

Also retiring was business manager Verne Lewellen, the former star halfback of the Packers and one-time general manager, who reached retirement age, 65. Thomas M. Miller, assistant to the general manager, also will handle the duties of business manager. Also added to the office staff was Al Tremel, who has been named film manager.

One new director was named —

Glenn Humphrey of Milwaukee who replaces the late Herb Mount of Milwaukee. Dominic Olejniczak starts his 10th year as president of Green Bay Packers, Inc.

Lambeau Field, Green Bay home of the Packers, was made playable the year-around by installation of electrical heating cables under the sod. The field will still have to be covered to keep out excess moisture but the coils will keep it from freezing.

SEVEN TD'S ON RUNBACKS SET RECORD

The Packers set one individual and three team records in 1966.

Don Chandler captured the lone individual record — eight points after touchdown in the 58-3 victory over the Falcons in Milwaukee. This broke the mark of seven which was held jointly by Paul Hornung, Jerry Kramer and Don Hutson.

Team records falling were touch-downs on runbacks, fewest interceptions and percentage of pass completions.

The Bays scored seven TDs on runbacks to crack the old mark of five set in 1965. Starr and Zeke Bratkowski permitted only five interceptions — one less than the old record of six set in '64. The pass completion percentage was 60.7 — a shade better than the old mark of 60.1 in 1962.

Six of the runback TDs were scored on interceptions and the other was a 77-yard return of a punt by Donny Anderson against the Falcons. Bob Jeter returned two interceptions for tee-dees—one for 75 yards vs. the Rams and the other for 46 vs. the Colts. The other interceptions were made by Herb Adderley, 68 yards vs. the Falcons; Lee Roy Caffey, 52 yards vs. the Colts; Doug Hart, 40 yards vs. the Falcons; Willie Wood, 20 yards vs. the Bears.

In addition, Jim Taylor added to all-time career totals in rushing attempts and yards and Starr added to his career records in passes attempted and completed, yards gained, touchdowns and efficiency.

Here are the individual and team Packer records — with apologies to those who played before records were compiled:

ELIJAH PITTS

FROM NO. 2
TO NO. 1

By Gene Hintz
United Press International

So what's so great about being No. 2?

Anyone who has joined the latest fad of bragging about being second best hasn't yet talked to Elijah Pitts.

As the Packers' super-sub turned super-starter puts it:

"It's a pretty discouraging thing at first. I was playing behind a couple of real good football players — Tom Moore and Paul, of course. Then, they're not old players either. You sit there and sit there and these guys are still going strong. It's kind of difficult, kind of discouraging."

"And, you're waiting to play. You know you're going to get the chance. But you can't really get mentally ready — and it's hard!"

Back in 1961, few football fans were familiar with the name "Elijah Pitts." It even took sportswriters some time to realize it was Elijah Pitts from Philander Smith and not vice versa.

And, until last year's super-season, Pitts was thought of mainly as the guy who leads the charge when the Packers' suicide kickoff squad run downfield.

The road to the top wasn't an easy one for the likeable native of Conway, Ark., who didn't give much thought to playing professional football until his junior year in college.

"Then," he said, "with the new league coming in, I thought I might have a chance."

When Pitts left Pine Street high school, there wasn't much doubt about what college he was going to.

"My high school coach, Mike Summerville, probably helped me as much in football as anyone," he said. "He had gone to Philander and, I guess, that was the main reason I went there."

At the 600-student, Methodist-supported school in Little Rock, Pitts made as many headlines in track as he did in football. But, while his times of 9.6 seconds in the 100-yard dash and 47.1 in the 440 weren't quite good enough to meet Olympic standards, they did play a big part in getting the Packers to draft him 13th after the 1960 season.

Still, he wasn't exactly the most hopeful man that next July when he reported to St. Norbert College and the Packers' training camp.

"You know how you're doing," he recalled. "But you're not a name and coming from a school that's not a name . . . well, you have to play it by ear, more or less."

During that championship year, Pitts got little chance to show what he could do, but his speed and tackling ability brought him honors as captain of the suicide squads. He gained only 75 yards on 22 carries and didn't do much better the next season.

Then, in 1963, with Paul Hornung shelved for the season, Pitts got a better chance to show what he could do, picking up 212 yards on 54 carries while replacing Moore. With the return of Hornung, Pitts was a spot player in 1964 and 1965.

Last year, there was much talk that Pitts was on his way out. Despite the trade of Tom Moore to the Rams, Vince Lombardi went to camp with probably the best running back crew in the League. Added to the all-time great tandem of Hornung and Taylor were Donny Anderson and Jim Grabowski, a pair of widely-heralded rookies.

"I understood the challenge I was going to have, but never really gave it too much thought," he said. "In this business . . . under Lombardi . . . you're going to get what you are." And what Pitts was was versatile. And, if something happened, he was the only substitute running back Lombardi had.

Through the first five games, though, Pitts carried the ball only 12 times as Hornung enjoyed the "Anderson Challenge" and made a brilliant comeback. Then, at Chicago in the sixth game of the season, Hornung left the field rubbing his shoulder after a particularly brutal play in the end zone.

Pitts came in cold and responded beautifully picking up 40 yards in eight carries and scoring once. He was used sparingly the next week in the rout of Atlanta, but still managed to catch a pair of passes for 66 yards and before the next week's games were history, Pitts had become a name that would be remembered.

In a crucial game at Detroit, he picked up 99 yards rushing and added another 31 passing to key a Packer victory. That performance stood as the best all season by any Green Bay back.

He repeated that brilliant performance the next week at home against Minnesota with 89 yards in 18 carries and four receptions for another 58 yards. And, when the season ended, he had gained 393 yards rushing and another 460 passing to emerge as one of the NFL's biggest threats. His 10 touchdowns raised his career scoring total to 156 points — 14th best on Green Bay's all-time list.

It was only natural that Pitts would pick a game from the 1966 season as one giving him his biggest thrill . . . "It had to be at Baltimore when we wrapped up the Western Division title," he said. "That was the best of all."

"You know, I've been with the Packers six years and I have yet to hear Coach give the same pep talk. Before we went out there, he gave us one I'll never forget. It stirred up something . . . something you can't explain. We just couldn't wait for the whistle to blow."

In that game, Pitts played a key role as the Packers won 14-10. He picked up 43 yards rushing and 79 passing and scored both touch-downs.

Pitts, whose play made it impossible for Hornung to get back in the rest of the season, and the Golden Boy turned (New Orleans) Saint, have nothing but good to say about each other.

Says Hornung, "Pitts never makes a mistake. He may be a great star."

Says Pitts: "Paul is one of the greatest guys I've ever known. I'm sure everyone on the Packers feels the same way. If he saw something on the field that I didn't, he'd come over and tell me. He helped me everywhere he could — even though he knew I was taking his place."

"He's one of the biggest losses we could imagine. He's valuable to the ball club in a lot of ways besides playing football. I have nothing but admiration for him."

Pitts, during the off-season, works as a sales representative for a Milwaukee Brewery. And, his play last year and his natural speaking ability has made him one of the most sought-after speakers on the banquet circuit.

One day last spring, he attended a convention in Chicago and then drove some 350 miles to make it for a high school banquet in Chippewa Falls. He brought his wife and son, Ronnie, 4, along.

"It was getting so my wife was wondering just what I was doing all the time. She'd seen me so seldom since the season ended," he explained. "So I decided to show her."

Speaking to some 250 persons at the dinner he gave his opinion of just why the Packers have been so successful — coaching and dedication.

"The individuals on our team are no better than on any other team in the NFL," he said. "But you have to have a little something else in addition to ability. You have to have spirit, character and dedication."

"Our dedication makes us want to win . . . to play together. If one guy makes a mistake, the rest of the team picks him up. I remember I fumbled twice last year — once against Minnesota and that led to a defeat and once against Dallas. There was a lot of money at stake, but not once did the rest of the team fail to come up to me and bring my spirits back up."

As for the coaching, Pitts is extremely proud of Lombardi.

"Mental toughness is the most important thing in pro football and Vince is one man who can put it into a team. He's a great coach. I've never known anyone — and I doubt there is anyone — who can get a team psychologically ready for a game like he can."

The 28-year-old Pitts would like "another three or four good years" playing and "after that I'll take what I can get."

"The older guys tell me to stay in as long as I can," he said.

end zone. So it was fourth down on the one, and the clock was running with just over 30 seconds to go.

Meredith called another rollout to the right, but Green Bay's left linebacker, Dave Robinson, broke through. He pushed end Bob Hayes aside at the line, cut behind guard Leon Donohue and trapped Meredith along the sideline. Meredith somehow got away with a "wounded duck" pass, despite Robinson's bear hug, but Tom Brown intercepted for Green Bay and it was all over. The Packers' fourth title in seven years, an unprecedented string of success in the NFL, was assured.

Ermal Allen, Dallas offensive backfield coach who had been on the phones from the press box to the bench, gave Robinson great credit for his play.

"He made it himself," Allen said. "We had never run that to the right out of a brown-left formation. So he hadn't seen it on the films or been told to watch for it. He just reacted properly and probably cost us the game."

Certainly if Dallas had scored there, the Cowboys had momentum, but Green Bay has a way of coming up with the play it needs when it needs it. In the game as a whole, Dallas ran off 73 plays to Green Bay's 58 and outgained the Packers, 418 yards to 367. Yet, the Packers could have settled the issue much earlier with Chandler's fifth extra point.

Mark Duncan, supervisor of NFL officials, probably gave as good a capsule description of the game as anyone:

"This game had everything — tremendous execution by both offenses against two of the best defenses in football, a fast start by the Packers, a great rally by a young team like the Cowboys, and then, of course, that finish.

"No one ever played a better game at quarterback than Bart Starr did today. If anyone ever did, you'd have to show me. And I wouldn't believe it."

Lombardi expressed pleasure with the Packers' offense in his post-game interviews and made one point for the record before a question was asked: "They say we don't have an offense. We've got it when we need it. We knew we had to score points to beat this club."

third quarter, the other when Pitts slid off tackle from a yard out in the fourth as the Pack's front wall closed down to the inside.

Although Wood's timely theft was the acknowledged turning point, Packer headmaster Vince Lombardi traced the Packers' bristling second half resurgence to a more determined approach. "We didn't readjust in the second half, all we did was to get tougher and more aggressive," he declared during a freewheeling postgame conference. "We blitzed some three or four times, and then things started breaking our way."

Then, in a rare flash of humor (football is a very serious business to the ex-Block of Granite, as his glossy record graphically suggests), he couldn't resist adding a facetious "explanation."

Twirling the game ball, presented to him by his appreciative players, in his square cut hands, the scholarly Italian said with a chuckle, "This National Football League ball catches better and kicks better than the American Football League ball."

TUNNELL IN 'HALL'

Emlen Tunnell, the former Giant star who closed out his career with the Packers, was among the eight professional football immortals elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, O., in 1967.

Others chosen: Chuck Bednarik, center and linebacker of the Eagles; the late Charles Bidwill, owner of the Chicago Cardinals (now St. Louis); Paul E. Brown, former Browns coach; Bobby Layne, former quarterback with the Bears, New York Bulldogs, Lions and Steelers; Daniel F. Reeves, owner of the Rams; Ken Strong, Giant halfback; and Joe Stydahar, Bear tackle.

Tunnell was brought to the Packers by Coach Vince Lombardi, former Giant coach, after playing 11 seasons in New York.

NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE

The National Football League introduces the four new C's this season, the Central and Coastal Divisions of the Western Conference and the Capitol and Century Divisions of the Eastern Conference. The setup equalizes competition since each club will play 11 different teams in the new schedule compared to seven in previous years. Each team will play home end home games against the opponents in its own division, single games with four teams in the opposite division in its conference and single games with one of the divisions in the opposite conference to round out a 14-game schedule. Example: The Packers play two games with the Bears, Lions and Vikings in the Central Division, single games with the Colts, Falcons, 49ers and Rams in the Coastal Division; and single games with the Browns, Cardinals, Steelers and Giants of the Capitol Division.

COACH GEORGE HALAS GESTURES FROM SIDELINES — WITH GUSTO.

NEW QB—NEW LOOK

The Bears, traditional rivals of the Packers, take on a new look this season with a new quarterback and the departure of kick end Mike Ditka.

Ditka went to the Eagles in exchange for Jack Concannon, a four-year quarterback veteran, who played in the shadow of Norm Smead since the Eagles selected him as their first draft pick in 1964. Concannon presided at two late-season victories in the Eagles' drive to second place in the Eastern Conference last year.

Concannon figures to be the Bears' quarterback of the future and he could replace Rudy Bukich and Bill Wade this season. Bukich is in his 13th season, Wade his 14th. Backing up Concannon, youthwise, will be Larry Rakestraw, a third-year player.

COACH JOE SCHMIDT

YOUNGEST IN LEAGUE

Meet Joe Schmidt, youngest head coach in the National Football League at the age of 35, 11th field boss in the 34-year history of the Lions, and their only head coach whose entire professional career was spent in a Detroit uniform.

He joined the Lions as a seventh draft choice from the University of Pittsburgh in 1953. When he hung up his playing uniform a year ago after 13 brilliant seasons, every honor in professional football had come his way.

Joe was named to the Pro Bowl squad 10 times in his 13 seasons despite two shoulder operations. He captained the Lions nine straight years, was voted to the NFL All-Pro team on eight occasions and saw his teammates name him their Most Valuable Player in 1955-57-58 and again in 1961. Schmidt retired after the 1965 season and worked under Harry Gilmer in 1966 as a freshman coach.

He came out of college as a fullback but was groomed for the job of middle linebacker, a position unheard of prior to the 1950's. Up to that time, pro teams utilized a seven-man line on defense — usually anchored by a big man like Les Bingaman in the center.

The new trend called for the use of a four-man defensive line by dropping off the ends and pulling back the middle guard. Schmidt played a corner linebacker post for several years until the Lions adopted the four-man line principle. Joe then was moved into the middle linebacker slot.

He called the defensive signals and gained the reputation of being the finest field general in the league by studying every rival quarterback so thoroughly that he gained an insight into what play that man would be most likely to call in a given situation.

BUD GRANT

A NEW IMAGE

Bud Grant, the 39-year-old native of Superior, Wis., who succeeded Norm Van Brocklin as head coach of the Vikings, wants to create "our own image."

He explains: "When you hear about the Chicago Bears you always hear about those big, bad Bears. When you hear about the Green Bay Packers you hear words like meticulous and polished and relentless. The statistics don't always bear these descriptions out but they don't shake the image."

"We must create our own image. We want a unique identity and we hope that it will be an image of winning."

Grant feels his Vikings is a contender — "a contender in a sense that anytime we go out on a football field we'll know we have a chance of beating any team. We're not talking about contending evenly with every team. Green Bay is our champion and an excellent football team. But it didn't dominate the league last year and we hope it won't dominate it in 1967."

Grant, a one-time star at the University of Minnesota, was with the Philadelphia Eagles for two seasons after playing at Great Lakes under Paul Brown. He later played four seasons at Winnipeg and then succeeded Allie Sherman as Winnipeg coach in 1957.

His teams won Canada's Western Conference championship in five of his 10 seasons in Winnipeg where he had a record of 121 wins, 66 losses and 3 ties.

Wear the shoes with the "walking papers" (You win all the time)

Your comfort's no gamble when you buy Allen-Edmonds shoes with "walking papers" that guarantee comfort in writing.

Allen-Edmonds can afford to make this guarantee, because only Allen-Edmonds makes shoes with so many comfortable extras. No nails, for example.

Every shoe is stitched all-round . . . locked into a unit that flexes, bends and rolls with the foot. A little "sole-searching" reveals a foot-soothing cushion of cork between inner and outer soles. Thermal insulation against heat and cold extends comfort to all seasons.

Pursue the Packers (and all good things) in guaranteed-comfortable Allen-Edmonds shoes. Many handsome styles to choose from . . . in a variety of selected leathers. Look for them at fine stores nearby, or write direct:
